THE BLACK HAND SOCIETY

Over One Hundred Warrants to be Sworn Out and Served Today.

Warrants will be sworn out today for the arrest of more than one hundred alleged members of the Italian Black Hand society, who infest mining regions in and about Monongahela. Chief of Police Leo Logan of Monongahela, has started out to rid Washington county of anarchists and the bad element of foreigners

Yesterday afternoon a meeting of foreigners of anarchistic principles was held in Courtney, a small suburb of Monongahela, and violent speeches were made denouncing the government and calling down vengeance upon the head of the irrepressible chief of police. Two of the men became so rabid in their talk that John Eckert, the proprietor of the hotel where the meeting was held, closed the house against the band.

Yesterday Chief Logan learned that Levi Constantina, alias Pietro Foraki, said to be the secretary of the Monongahela Valley band, was living in a house near the Rocky Hole mine, about two miles from Finleyville Last evening at 6 o'clock, Chief Logan and Special Officer Charles Thomas and a posse of citizens, started for Finleyville. Burgess John Gaston of Finleyville, with John Dawson, his chief of police, were on hand to meet the posse.

Up until press time we were unable to learn whether or not the men had been captured.

Revival

Revival work still goes on in the A. M. E. Church. There was a splendid turn out last evening and the Rev. Mr. M. M. Allbeck preached a most interesting and instructive sermon using as a text the first Psalm The Sermon was very impressive and all present seemed effected. Mr. Allbeck made a very forceful appeal to the unconverted which resulted in three young men rising and standing as an indication of their desire to lead better lives. During an after service these young men came forward and knelt at the alter. Rev. J. R. Monier will preach this evening. Womens' prayer and praise service begins at 7:30. Rev. J. V. Wright will preach tomorrow night.

Sneak Thieves Again.

Yesterday afternoon a lady called at the home of Mrs. Crumm, Reed avenue, saying she wished to buy a small quantity of milk. While Mrs. Crumm was absent getting the milk, the thief helped herself to the contents of the refrigerator and then left. Mrs. Crumm says she did not see a basket, but it is evident that the sneak had one, as it was necessary to call up the grocer at once. Something should be done to stop this practice, as it is becoming too frequent in that locality.

Indorse Candidacy of a Woman.

The Friday Conversational club and the Mothers' club of Monongahela will join in an effort to have a woman elected to the board of school directors Mrs. B. L. Ross is the candidate selected. A committee has been chosen to have Mrs. Ross' name placed either on one of the regular party tickets or on an Independent ticket at the spring election

Danced in the Dime Novel Way.

With a revolver John Baker created a panic in a traction car a short distance below Beaver by commanding a fellow passenger to dance. The man refused and Baker persuaded him to go through a few steps by firing three shots through the floor at his feet. Baker was finally arrested.

WANT BRIDGE AT DONORA.

Almost One Hundred Citizens Invade Washington, Pa., To Find Out Where They A e At.

Washington, Pa. was invaded yesterday by a large delegation from the river. The occasion for this demonstration is the status of the bridge question at Donora, where the movement originated, and the citizens of that borough to the number of almost a hundred were making a call on the county commissioners to find out where they "are at." Since the induction into office of the new board, it is claimed that the project has not been pushed.

The delegation on reaching Washington, went at once to the county commissioners' office, where the members presented their case, setting forth the necessity for the structure, and that it should be built at once. The spokesman for the delegation, put up a strong argument, saying that all the formalities had been gone through according to law, that the commissioners of Westmoreland county are ready to go ahead with the structure, and that the matter now hinges on the action of the commissioners of Washington county.

For the commissioners Mr. Myers said that the present board had not yet been in consultation with the commissioners of Westmoreland county, and that it would be impossible for him to state what action would be taken.

WEBSTER NOTES.

S. M. Kelley, tax collector of Rostraver is looking after legal matters at Monessen today.

Messrs. John Hutchinson and H O. Hayden of West Newton, were stopping at the Union hotel yesterday.

A party of young people from Black Diamond, came to grief last night, while driving to Webster in a hay wagon, where they were to attend a party to be held at Conrelly's. After the entire number had left the wagon to allow the horses to draw the empty wagon up a very steep hill, the horses became unmanageable, the wagon was upset and all rolled to the bottom of the hill. Fortunately the driver was not hurt. After walking the rest of the distance to town and spending the night here, the party returned home on the early train this morning.

February Term of Criminal Court.

For the February term of Quarter Sessions court of Westmoreland county which opens on Monday February 5. District Attorney J. E. B. Cunningham has 96 cases listed. This includes the usual number of small cases for the fore part of the term. The most important case for the first week is listed for Friday February 9 and is that of Dr. J. C. Miller of Jeanette, charged with abortion by Joseph C. Nelms. Monessen will contribute her share to the list.

A good many people are using Hyomei these days. It is the guaranteed cure for catarrh, where you get your money back unless it cures. Druggist Warnock has the local agency.

AT THE THEATRE.

Jack Allen, who essays the role of the Weary Willie in Manager Newell's comedy sensation, "A Jolly American Tramp", is the best delineator of the genus hobo on the American stage. His makeup is said to be perfect and so exact that were he to leave the stage and appear on the streets in his tatters and rags our police would surely send him to the workhouse, purely on his looks. In this play he says some very funny things and does some very grotesque specialties, His singing is said to inimitable. At the Monessen opera house Saturday night

Holly Club Gave Reception.

At a reception given yesterday afternoon by the Holly club, in Kelly's hall, a discussion was held regarding the keeping intact of Niagara Falls for Americans A petition, signed by all the members and friends present, was sent to the governor requesting the prevention of the utilization of the Falls for water power, after which a beautiful musical program was carried out, followed by a most delicious lunch The hall was very nicely decorated in the colors of the club, red and green. All present report a most enjoyable time.

Killed by Train.

A foreigner, whose name was Wassel Lasak, was killed last night at Manown Tipple, by the 7.35 train. His body which was badly cut and mangled, was taken to Wright's morgue and prepared for burial. Lasak, who has a wife and five children living at Ella Mines, was trespassing at the time of the accident. Lasak was a Russian and seemed well to do and was a member of several societies in one of which he held an insurance policy for $1,000, which goes to his wife.

MENTAL ATTITUDE.

It Has Much to Do With Winning Success In Life.

The mental attitude which we always hold toward our work or our aim has everything to do with what we may accomplish. If you go to your work with the attitude of a slave who goes lashed to his task and see in it only drudgery; if you work without hope, seeing no future in what you are doing beyond getting a bare living; if you see no light ahead, nothing but poverty, deprivation and hard work all your life; if you think that you were destined to such a hard life, you cannot expect anything else than that which you look for.

If, on the other hand, no matter how poor you may be today, you can see a better future; if you believe that some day you are going to rise out of humdrum work, that you are going to get up out of the basement of life into the drawing room, where beauty, comfort and joy await you; if your ambition is clean cut and you keep your eye steadily upon the goal which you hope to reach and feel confident that you have the ability to attain it, you will accomplish something worth while. The direction of your effort will follow your eye. If that looks up as well as on, you will climb.

That one quality of holding persistently the faith in themselves and never allowing anything to weaken the belief that somehow they would accomplish what they undertook has been the underlying principle of all great achievers. The great majority of men and women who have given civilization a great uplift started poor and for many dark years saw no hope of accomplishing their ambition, but they kept on working and believing that somehow a way would be opened. Think of what this attitude of hopefulness and faith has done for the world's great inventors—how most of them plodded on through many years of dry, dreary drudgery before the light came, and the light would never have come but for their faith, hope and persistent endeavor.

What if they had listened to their advisers! Even those who loved them tried to beg them to give up the foolishness of coining their lives into that which would never be practical or useful. We are enjoying today thousands of blessings, comforts and conveniences which have been bequeathed us by those resolute souls who were obliged often to turn a deaf ear to the pleadings of those they loved best as they struggled on amid want and woe for many years.—Success.

SCAR FACED CHARLEY

(Copyright, 1906, by McClure, Phillips & Co.]

There were eight of us outside and inside the Deadwood coach, including a woman, Mrs. Bushrod, when Scar Faced Charley robbed us.

It was 3 o'clock in the afternoon, and we were skirting foothills covered with pine scrub, when Scar Faced Charley stepped out of the bushes, lifted a double barreled shotgun to his shoulder and called upon the driver to pull up. I think all four of us on top of the coach made a motion for our guns, but the driver yelled at us:

"Stop that, you cussed fools! Do you want to be blown to kingdom come?"

Scar Face was at that time a man of about thirty, rather picturesquely attired, and, as he was clean shaven, he looked more like a faro man than a highway robber. There was a smile on his face as he looked up, but something warned you that it was a smile that could come off mighty sudden if things did not go his way. He took a look into the coach and then stepped back and said:

"Now, gentlemen, let's have no fuss over this thing. You up there get down, and you inside come out and form in line and put your hands up. Of course, the lady is not included."

None of us saw a chance to get in a shot while we were lining up, and once on the ground it was too late. He passed to the rear of us and removed our shooters and tossed them into the bushes. The driver was permitted to retain his seat. He had no treasure box, and the mails were not asked for.

"Now, gentlemen," said Scar Face in his breezy way. "I shall pass in front of you with my hat, and you will drop in watches and purses. I put you on your honor. If I afterward discover that any one has held anything back it will be bad for him."

One of the insiders was a Jew. He had a big roll, and skimming off about $50 he handed the rest to the woman to take care of. After the contribution the bandit stopped in front of Mr. Isaacs and said:

"You are keeping something back."

"So help me gracious, I'm not."

"Don't lie. Where is your roll?"

All this time Mrs. Bushrod had been a quiet spectator, though she was boiling over with anger at the idea of our letting a single man rob the eight of us. She had to say something or burst, and, shaking the Jew's roll out of the window, she called out:

"Yes; here is his money, and I'd like to see you get it! I've also got some of my own, but you'll never get a dollar of it into your dirty fingers."

Up to this time Scar Face had never robbed a woman. If the widow had kept her tongue still she would have been treated with chivalry, but once started she let her temper run away with her. She gave the bandit a great tongue lashing, and a part of her remarks included us. He gave her five minutes, seeming to be amused and yet resolved, and when she paused for breath he advanced to the coach, thrust the barrels of the gun through the window and within a foot of her nose and said:

"Hand me over every dollar you have got about you or you won't live ten seconds!"

She went deadly white and handed over, and as near as I could make out she was in a swoon for the next five minutes. The bandit got a fine haul and was well pleased. When he had pocketed the plunder he said:

"I shall now bid you goodby, gentlemen. Let no one move for the next five minutes. Then you may resume your journey."

He bowed and stepped aside into the scrub, and we looked at each other in a foolish way. After three or four minutes the driver told us to get in, and it was then that the widow got out. She had recovered from her swoon, and her face was fiery red instead of deathly pale.

"Look here, you pack of poltroons, are you going to let that scoundrel get away with all our money?" she exclaimed, as she looked from one to the other.

"But what can we do?" asked one.

"Do? Do? Why, you cowards, you can follow him up and capture him!"

None of us saw it that way and took our places. The driver called to the woman to get in, but she turned on him with:

"Go on with your cowards! I'm going to follow that robber to the ends of the earth but what I get my money back!"

With that she headed straight into the scrub on the robber's trail, and after waiting for her five minutes and vainly calling to her to return the stage proceeded and reached Deadwood four hours late.

When the story was told, the sheriff took a posse and started for the scene, but before he reached it they met the widow walking along the road. She explained that she had followed the robber for a mile through the scrub and then came upon him in camp. She at once started in to give him "gowdy," and no doubt her other effort was discounted. She sat right down in camp, and said she wouldn't stir an inch until she had her money back. He threatened her, and she defied him. He got up to run away, and she grabbed hold of him. No matter what Scar Face's experience had been with women, he saw that he had caught a Tartar in this case, and he did the sensible thing by restoring her money and letting her go her own way.

She arrived in Deadwood with every dollar of it, and her pluck was so highly appreciated that they made up a public purse of $1,000 for her.

AN AFTER DINNER STORY

[Original.]

The gentlemen rose and stood respectfully while the ladies retired. Then the former lighted cigars while the latter had coffee in the drawing room. Mrs. Ernest remarked that she had heard that the first meeting of Mrs. Amory with her husband had been very romantic and asked Mrs. Amory to tell about it. Mrs. Amory complied, telling how the man she was to marry had surprised her in street costume when she had intended that he should see her in evening dress. This led to other stories of a similar kind, each more vapid than the last. One of the party, a newcomer among them, sat unnoticed by the rest. When the conversation lagged one of the ladies said to her:

"I judge, Mrs.—I beg pardon, I didn't catch your name—that you can't contribute to these interesting episodes or you would have done so already."

"There was a trifling incident between me and the man I married, but I fear it would sound tame."

"I'm sure it would not. Tell it by all means."

"Mr. Hardy—Hardy is my name—in the summer of 189— owned a yacht. He invited a small party to go sailing with him, I among the number. The truth is he had been in love with me since the previous Christmas, when he had saved me from death, my dress having been set aflame by a burning Christmas tree."

"I should suppose that it would have been you who fell in love with him," remarked one of the ladies, taking a fresh cup of coffee.

"So I did. His coat tails caught fire. Seizing them, I hugged them to my bosom, extinguishing them. I saved his life, but retain a scar on my breast to this day."

Several of the ladies put down their coffee cups. All were interested. This was something far more stirring than anything that had yet been produced.

"As I was saying," continued the narrator, "Fitzherbert—Fitzherbert was his first name—got up the yachting party on purpose to propose to me. After luncheon every one left us alone together in the cabin. Fitzherbert pleaded with me for an hour, I standing out with maidenly modesty. 'My husband,' I told him, 'must be brave, cool in the presence of danger and, withal, resourceful.' 'Would,' he replied, 'that I might find an opportunity to show at least that I can die for you.'"

"Delightful!" exclaimed several listeners in unison.

"Suddenly I saw him start. I listened, with him, and heard a strange noise without. Then something struck the yacht, and we were thrown against the side, which had now become the floor. Then there was a further change, and we stood on the ceiling. The yacht had been caught in a squall unprepared and had turned turtle."

"Beg pardon," said Mrs. Amory. "What do you mean by turning turtle?"

"Capsize," replied the narrator imperturbably. "Of course the water rushed in, but the air caught in the cabin prevented its being filled. We stood in water up to our necks in almost total darkness on the ceiling of the cabin."

"Good gracious!" exclaimed the party at a breath.

"Fitzherbert at once took advantage of the situation to show that he possessed every requirement to be my husband. Taking me in his arms, he said to me: 'Do not be alarmed. This is nothing. Trust to me.'

"The yacht was full of fishing tackle, and a fishhook fortunately caught in his clothes. Pulling on the line to which it was attached, he drew up a reel.

"'My plan is complete,' he said. 'Hold on to the reel I shall dive and rise to the surface beside the yacht, taking the line with me. When I am free I shall pull you out by the line Courage.'

"Now, there was just one best place to attach the fishhook. but"—hesitating—"I don't like to mention it."

"Do so." "You must." "Tell us." came from the group at a breath.

"The seat of his trousers. Giving me a parting caress to reassure me he dived, and in about a minute I felt a pull on the line."

"What a terrible situation!" exclaimed Mrs. Ernest.

"It was the moment of my life. I followed the line under water, was guided down the companionway and under the gunwale, then rose to the surface, where Fitzherbert caught me, supported me to the yacht, and we crawled up on the bottom, from whence we were rescued later by a tug."

The lady ceased to speak, and every one present drew a long breath.

"Were the others saved?" inquired one of the party.

"All lost," was the reply. "Not one left to congratulate us on the engagement that occurred on the yacht's bottom."

The story teller stirred her coffee, sipped it and sat demurely silent.

"Did you not suffer from shock?" asked Mrs. Ernest.

"I would have had I not been stimulated by the devotion I had received. I had been saved from a horrible death by a man who loved me devotedly, whom I loved and who filled all my requirements in a husband."

Soon after the party dispersed. When the rest had gone Mrs. Amory asked the hostess:

"Who is your friend who has passed through such a thrilling experience?"

"She is a writer of fiction. Her story, I fancy, was impromptu, but was none the less interesting. I'm glad she enlisted your attention. You did not seem to notice her at first."

HAPPY WOMEN.

Wouldn't any woman be happy,
After years of backache suffering,
Days of misery, nights of unrest,
The distress of urinary troubles,
To find relief and cure?
No reason why any reader
Should suffer in the face of evidence like this:

Mrs. Almira A. Jackson, of East Front St., Traverse City, Mich., says: "For twenty years I was doctoring for kidney and liver trouble but without benefit. Just before I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I was almost paralyzed. I could hardly stand on my feet because of the numbness and lack of circulation. Had a knife been thrust into my kidneys the pain could not have been more intense. My sleep was disturbed by visions of distorted figures. The kidney secretions were annoyingly irregular, and I was tortured with thirst and always bloated. I used seven boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills. The bloating subsided until I weighed 100 pounds less, could sleep like a child and was relieved of the pain and the irregularity of the kidney action. My circulation is good and I feel better in every way."

A FREE TRIAL of this great kidney medicine which cured Mrs. Jackson will be mailed on application to any part of the United States. Address Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, N. Y. For sale by all druggists; price, 50 cents per box.

A Great Painter's Beginning.

Sir Thomas Lawrence was one of the great portrait painters in England. His parents were poor, his father being a country innkeeper. One day Lord Shaftesbury's father and mother stopped at the inn, having their younger son, the future lord, with them. In conversation the innkeeper spoke of the genius of his boy in drawing and wished them to test it by a picture of their son. They assented, thinking to gratify a father's pride, but not looking for any evidence of superior talent. The boy came in modestly, with chalk and paper, and in a few minutes had drawn a picture of their son on which the parents looked with wonder. They recognized the genius and the promise of future greatness and befriended the young artist, giving him the help needed to develop his wonderful gift.

The Valuable Palmyra Palm.

A Hindoo poem enumerates 800 purposes to which the Palmyra palm alone is put. Among other things it supplies paper for writing upon, an intoxicating drink called "toddy," large quantities of sugar fruit and a vegetable for the table when the plants are young. Palm wine is also obtained from the juice of the sago palm, which yields excellent sugar candy when boiled. The pith of the trunk forms a large part of the food of the natives in many parts of India. Ropes, brushes and brooms are manufactured from the fiber of the leaf stalks.

A Real Show.

"The High Flyers" are holding the boards at the Monessen opera house Jan 26 and the management, from all reports has booked a winner. While this is a entirely new organization, it has left all its ancestors in the shade. It is simply a case of new ideas, new faces, new management and has surpassed anything ever attempted in this line. The performance includes two one act comedies, "A [illegible]," and "Fun in the Subway," which are new and up to date. The scenery of the Subway Station is a exact reproduction of the Twenty third street station of the New York Subway and is a masterpiece of scenic work. There are six [illegible] acts which are all [illegible] in their respective branches and are not equaled by any other traveling [illegible].
